Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

Weather of Concern

- Red Flag Warning in effect from 1400 hours Tuesday afternoon through 2300 hours Tuesday evening for areas in Siskiyou and Modoc Counties.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A few showers or thunderstorms will again be possible this afternoon over the interior mountains of northwest California as an upper low moves inland. Mostly dry conditions are anticipated for the rest of the week as dry west-southwesterly flow develops aloft. Coastal clouds have returned and will last through this coming weekend, though some partial clearing will occur each afternoon.

Medford Weather:

Expect the storms in northern California to gradually move south and eastward with time and decrease in coverage Tuesday evening, but models continue to show showers and possible thunderstorms re-energizing overnight into Wednesday as the large scale trough moves in.

Reno Weather:

Low pressure off the California coast continues to pull moisture north into the Eastern Sierra. Chances of rain showers and thunderstorms will continue through Wednesday. Thunderstorm threats include the potential for localized flash flooding today and then transitioning to a wind and hail threat by Wednesday. Dry southwest flow establishes from Thursday into the weekend.

San Francisco Weather:

Lingering moisture from the remnants of Dolores will result in a chance of showers and thunderstorms through the afternoon. Otherwise, cooler conditions can be expected through Thursday. Dry weather conditions and near normal temperatures are likely for late week and into the upcoming weekend.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Mountain thunderstorms can be expected again today with moisture from Dolores still over the Valley. Fewer Sierra Cascade thunderstorms on Wednesday then dry through next weekend. Daytime temperatures will be a little below normal through the weekend climbing to near or above normal early next week.

Hanford Weather:

Abundant tropical moisture will continue over the central California interior today. As a result, more showers and thunderstorms are likely to develop over the mountains this afternoon with a slight chance over the lower elevations. Drier air will limit precipitation chances to the southern Sierra on Wednesday then isolated showers along the crest on Thursday.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

There will continue to be a chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms over the mountains and interior valleys. For Wednesday and Thursday, widespread low clouds are expected along with seasonable temperatures. For the end of the week and into the weekend, high pressure will strengthen, resulting in warmer temperatures and limited coastal low clouds and fog.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Dry southwest flow aloft will prevail for the rest of the week. A deep lower level tropical air mass west of the mountains will slowly transition toward a more typical marine air mass late in the week and decrease in depth for Thursday through next weekend. High temperatures will gradually warm into next weekend and low temperatures gradually cool as the lower level tropical moisture slowly decreases. This will return high and low temperatures to near average for next weekend.

Southeast California Weather:

Temperatures will remain hot through the week with highs approaching the 110 degree mark for some locales on the lower deserts by the weekend. More moisture returns this weekend, once again increasing the threat of isolated thunderstorms over the lower deserts.
